-Spectator Notes-

The Lions Fashion Show was a complete success. Wonderful variety of clothes from Mrs. Teddy Roosevelt's party dress through the latest in cocktail gowns to dresses for the small fry. Little Kay McCombs, three-year-old, got as big a kick out of the applause as the audience did out of seeing her turn slowly around the ramp. The entertainment acts put on by the Youth Center and Lions and Judge Ray Baugh and MC Mark Raggett and Lloyd Weer added up to a good show.

A couple of rather disconcerting questions were thrown at the council candidates at the Forum Monday night. One young man, obviously a strong believer in the neighborhood grocery store, wanted to know what they were "going to do about the Purity Store." Another man, evidently tired of hearing about "keeping Carmel as it is," wanted to know what they were going to do about changing it.

The boys at the Carmel High School got the first crack at the pool when it opened Wednesday. Thursday was girls' day. But on Wednesday some girls could be seen wistfully looking at the boys splashing about in the pool, obviously thinking about the next day.

Ada (Mrs. Bill) O'Malley will spend a few days in the hospital this week end. Most everyone will be glad to know that it's only for a minor operation. We hope to see her bobbing about Carmel again soon!

The Spectator has for a long time considered a honeymoon on a yacht to be ideal. It pleased us to see that Joan Glaser Menohar and Duane L. Cash, married last weekend, will spend their honeymoon cruising aboard his sister's yacht.

Gladys Dixon is now home convalescing after having spent several weeks in the hospital.

The new addition going up at the Highlands Inn promises to give a spectacular view of the ocean. Charles Reed, the manager, said room, going up on the west end, will be 900 square feet in area. By his description it will be mostly glass and will be called The Sunset Room.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Fred McNulty on the birth of their daughter Margaret Piper. Also to Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lynch, a son, and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Monroe, a daughter.

Village WeekNEXT TUESDAY VOTERS
SELECT NEW COUNCIL

Next Tuesday is election day in Carmel. This ballot is an important one for Carmel citizens. Besides naming three councilmen to serve for the next four years, the city sales tax issue and pensions for city employees are to be voted on.

Six candidates are running for the three council seats, Mayor Allen Knight, Gene Ricketts (both incumbents), Horace D. Lyon, Reed Pollack, Geraldine M. Smith, and Francis Whitaker.

The sales tax issue involves the approval or rejection of an ordinance prohibiting the imposition of a city sales tax which is at present in force in Carmel.

An advisory question, put on the ballot by the city council, seeks the citizens' opinion on the proposal to adopt some sort of pension plan for city employees.

Two other city positions are to be filled by this ballot, but both incumbents are unopposed. The terms of City Clerk Peter Mawdsley and City Treasurer Harry C. Hilbert have expired.

Four polling places will be open Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. They are the Youth Center, Fire House, Town Hall, and Sunset School.

CANDIDATES AIR VIEWS AT TOWN HALL FORUM

The large turn-out at the Town Hall meeting Monday night showed that Carmel voters are interested in next week's election. They thoroughly questioned all six council candidates.

The city sales tax seemed to be most important in the minds of the questioners. Although the future of the sales tax is up to the voters, several wanted to know how the candidates felt about the issue. Mayor Allen Knight and Incumbent Councilman Gene Ricketts supported the retention of the tax strongly. Horace Lyon and Reed Pollock also favored keeping the tax. Francis Whitaker, leader in the campaign to have the repeal put on the ballot, spoke strongly against it. Geraldine Smith said the matter was entirely up to the voters and would express no personal stand.

A crowd of between 600 and 700 persons attended the forum. Village Elder Statesman Bert Heron acted as moderator during the questioning of the candidates.

Statements by the six were applauded liberally and showed no particular favoritism on either candidates or issues. All those in the race seemed basically agreed that the preservation of the unique nature of Carmel is of the greatest importance.

Also at the meeting were the four candidates for the Monterey-Carmel municipal court judgeship. The four, Ray Baugh, present Monterey Justice, Kalmen Sapero, George P. Ross, Carmel police court judge, and Shelburn Robison, Carmel attorney, all spoke five minutes.

The election to name the judge comes in the June 3 primaries, and interest in the Carmel council race was dominant. None of the judge candidates was questioned during the forum period.

CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL VAULT BROKEN INTO

The most exciting school news of the week concerned the breaking in of the vault at the Carmel High School Wednesday night. The robbers wanted cash only and made off with about $100 of student body funds plus $15 in the school's petty cash.

The interesting part of the robbery is the fact that the brigands first broke into the auto shop to get tools with which to do the job. Investigating officers from the Sheriff's department believe it was done by adults.

COMMITTEE FORMED TO STUDY EDUCATION

A committee has been formed by a group of interested citizens, including former educators, to inform themselves on education on The Peninsula.

Called "The Friends of Physical Education on the Monterey Peninsula," the group intends to study local schools and encourage the public to be informed on school matters. No school officials are included in the group. The nucleus committee plans to extend membership to interested persons all over the Peninsula. Dr. Jesse F. Williams heads the committee, which includes Dr. Morse A. Cartwright, Dr. Remsen D. Bird, Dr. Henry S. Houghton, Dr. Charles W. Delaney, Cornelius van Niel, and Mrs. H. Lowenhaupt.

An Editorial

Tuesday is an important day in Carmel. The votes cast that day will set the course for city government for the next four years. Three of the five council seats will be filled. The sales tax issue will be decided. And the question of a pension plan for city employees will be determined.

Most important, in our opinion, is the sales tax issue.

The Spectator believes its retention is in the best interests of Carmel. The question has been thoroughly argued, and we believe it has been demonstrated that the tax is necessary to keep Carmel city finances on a sound basis. We urge a "NO" vote on the ordinance forbidding the city sales tax.

Because all candidates for council are basically agreed on retaining Carmel's characteristics, The Spectator believes all would do a conscientious job if elected. We have no preference among the six.

The approval of a pension plan for city employees we feel is important to the city. Municipal workers are always paid less than their counterparts in private employment. To secure the best possible men for the city, some sort of inducement is necessary. A pension plan provides this. It will be up to

Dear Friends:

Last week the Tavori Bazaar decided (from lack of business) our shop was not wanted or needed in the Peninsula area. We were going to dispose of our stock at cost.

Meanwhile we told all of our friends and customers of our decision. Everyone seemed unhappy and disappointed. We received encouragement from every source, pleading with us to be patient and give the local people another chance to discover some of our treasures.

We thought it over. Since we do love the beauty of the Peninsula and we have only been open six weeks, we have decided to maintain our shop for a while to see if we are really needed and wanted.

Come in and see us, browse around, and say hello.

Sincerely,

WHARF DOUBLE BILL

A double bill of two comedies on the institution of marriage will open at the Wharf Theatre on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday nights, April 4, 5, and 6. The evening will open with the domestic satire "A Cold Day in June" by Paul Clark of Pebble Beach.

The original comedy will be acted by a cast including Grace McKenney, who previously appeared at the Wharf in "Happy Birthday;" Paul Vornholt, Adrian Whyte, Inez Lucas, and Anthony Stanley. The play tells in humorous vein of some rather extraordinary consequences in the ordinary home of the Wagners, of Woodside, California, when a radio quiz program makes an unexpected telephone call.

Playing on the same bill with "A Cold Day in June," is the risqué comedy "Amphitryon 38." "Amphitryon 38" was originally one of the greatest successes in New York of the Lunts. The play was written by Jean Giraudoux, playwright of "Madwoman of Chaillot," who based the merry story on an ancient Greek comedy. S. N. Behrman, famed for "No Time For Comedy" and other hits, streamlined the script for the American stage.

The role of the promiscuous god Jupiter will be played at the Wharf by Martin Beck, newcomer to the Peninsula, who has previously acted on Broadway in Orson Welles' "Around the World" and Cole Porter's "Mexican Hayride." He played both Richard I and Richard II at the Pasadena Playhouse and many roles for Pittsburgh Playhouse. Playing opposite Beck is Peggy Cease, veteran Wharf player and star of "Blithe Spirit." Mrs. Cease recently appeared in "Liliom" and "Dark of the Moon."

Others in the "Amphitryon 38" cast include James Gariand, Maurice Shapiro, Craig Perkins, and Hugh Ferguson. Dorothy Osborne, one of the Peninsula's most popular comedienne, plays the role of Leda, who was loved by Jupiter in the guise of a rather peculiar swan.

"Amphitryon 38" and "A Cold Day in June" are under the direction of Thomas Brock and Robert Carson. Sets are by Nick LeFeuvre and costumes by Terry Eby. Lighting is handled by John Chitwood and Walt Scott. Tickets for the plays are now on sale at the Wharf Theatre box office, phone 3-4349.

INTERPLAYERS COMING FOR ANTA APRIL FESTIVAL

A purely experimental group, the Interplayers of San Francisco will present "Yes Is for a Very Young Man" during the ANTA-Monterey Drama Festival. The festival The festival will last from April 20 to 27.

Roy Franklin, coordinator of the group, is also the director and star of Gertrude Stein's unusual play. He has been with the Interplayers nearly four years and prior to that he spent five years at the world-famous Hedgrow Theatre in Moylan, Pennsylvania, with Jasper Deeter.

"Yes Is for a Very Young Man," Gertrude Stein's last play, was written in France prior to her death in 1946. It deals with a French family during the Occupation of France. Miss Stein wrote about the people she knew and loved, and her play is not only warm and moving, but has a deeply convincing ring of authenticity. The Interplayers' production of this stimulating play is a simple but realistic one, with the general mystification of Stein's writings being made remarkably clear for the audience.

A Review of

BLANCHE THEBOM

A capacity audience was on hand at Sunset Auditorium last Friday to hear Blanche Thebom, mezzo-soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera. Miss Thebom, who was presented by the Carmel Music Society, has a thrillingly beautiful voice, a most attractive appearance, and a charming manner.

The program chosen by Miss Thebom was a varied and taxing one, opening with three arias by Handel. These were sung with authority and revealed a beautifully controlled voice and wonderfully clear diction.

The second part of the program was a group of Schumann lieder. These were, for this listener, the least enjoyable renditions of the evening. Miss Thebom's voice was no less lovely in these songs, but the emotional understanding and communication so necessary to effective lieder singing seemed to be lacking. The listener was always outside, observing an acting performance, rather than sharing the singer's feelings.

With her next selection, Miss Thebom came into her own, to the vociferous delight of the audience. Her mastery of opera was abundantly evi-

A group of Rachmaninoff songs, for which Miss Thebom made English translations, followed. These were effectively sung with her usual clear enunciation.

The concluding group of songs by Celius Dougherty were notable mainly for their humorous content. Their musical value is doubtful and one disliked hearing a voice as fine as Miss Thebom's employed in such trivial works.

Miss Thebom was most generous with her encores and pleased her audience immensely with the inclusion of two more operatic selections, the Seguidilla from "Carmen," and the lovely "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" from Samson et Dalila. These were sung with consummate artistry and understanding and met with enthusiastic response.

Her other encores included Brahms' "Der Schmied" and two more of the comic pieces Miss Thebom unfortunately seems addicted to--"I Hate Music" and "Oh, Dear, What Can the Matter Be."

The book which has elicited the most critical comment among the new books at the library this week is William F. Buckley, Jr.'s God and Man at Yale. Buckley, who is a recent Yale graduate, questions the amount of academic freedom which should be allowed a faculty. He takes particular issue with the Yale department of economics which, according to his reckoning, steers a course toward collectivism. Buckley feels that certain moral concepts should serve as boundaries for academic freedom and that universities today are not achieving the educational goals desired by those who are paying the bills of education.

Admiral of the Fleet, Viscount Cunningham, who commanded the Allied Naval Forces during the African landings in World War II, as well as serving as Commander in Chief in the Mediterranean in 1940-41, has written an autobiography called, with considerable modesty, A Sailor's Odyssey. He recounts his entire naval career with the major portion of the book being devoted to the second World War. The book is long and detailed and should prove a valuable addition to the history of World War II.

A new edition has been issued of John Steinbeck's Log of the Sea of Cortez, with a new preface on Ed Ricketts added. This book tells of a trip taken by Steinbeck and Ricketts to Lower California in search of biological information on marine life. It is not a dry scientific study, however, as Steinbeck digresses frequently from his narrative to tell of the fascinating people and ideas they encountered.

Gertrude Mack, who has written biographies of Cezanne and Toulouse-Lautrec, has a new one on Gustave Courbet, the founder of the realist movement in French painting. The author spent much time in France gathering material for this book on an artist who also fancied himself a politician, with unfortunate results.

Gertrude Stein left all her unpublished works to Yale University and they are being issued, under the editorship of Carl van Vechten, at the rate of one a year. This year's puzzler is called Two, Gertrude Stein and Her Brother, and is a collection of essays, which are essays, which are essays.

AUSTIN A-40 PRIZE

The grand prize for King-Chinook Salmon in Monterey's first annual Salmon and Deep Sea Fishing Derby May 3 to June 29, will be an Austin, A-40, four door sedan. The Monterey Peninsula Sportsmen's Conservation Club, sponsors of the derby, is donating this important and exciting prize. Murray Vout, Monterey's independent auto dealer of Austins and English Fords, made the purchase of the Austin possible, by selling it to the Monterey Sportsmen's Conservation Club at a cost less than wholesale.

The rest of the important prizes for the nine other types of sporting fish will be on display soon. The other species of prize winning fish are Ling Cod, Halibut, Cabezone, Red Rock Cod, Blue Shark, Black Cod, Yellow Tail, Eel, and Octopus.

Might As Well "Get In Key"

Last Tuesday Judge Cunningham wanted to go fishing. "Why aren't you working?" I asked.

Judge explained how his wife had gone on a trip, taken his keys by mistake—and now he couldn't get in the office. So we went fishing.

Next day, he wanted me to go again. I was surprised those keys hadn't shown up yet. "The little woman phoned to say she mailed them," the Judge explained. "They're now in the office, under the mail slot. I'd get 'em if I could just open that door." He grinned and picked up his fishing rod.

(NOTE: Public Schools' Week will begin April 28. It is The Spectator's belief that no part of Carmel is more important to the welfare of the community than the schools. To introduce key education people to those who have not met them, The Spectator presents this series of Localights. Marjorie McCausland was presented last week.)

A tall man, with a gentle voice and manner, ARTHUR C. HULL is principal of Sunset School, a charge involving 18 teachers, four or five non-teaching employees, and 433 young Carmelites.

It all began in 1936 when Hull came to Carmel, fresh from San Francisco State College, to teach in the 7th and 8th grades. Classes were then larger and less numerous than now. After three years with these grades, he spent a year teaching physical education to the junior high school classes which, at that time, were included with the grammar school. They're now, of course, combined with the high school.

In 1941, Hull became a teaching-principal, dividing his time between classroom work and administration, and grew with the school into a full time principalship.

Under his supervision the school has grown from a one-class per grade operation to its present size, wherein each grade classification, except the kindergarten, is comprised of two separate classes, each with its own teacher.

Open to new ideas, Hull this year instituted parent conferences in place of report cards for the first and third quarters, a system which has so far brought excellent results.

In 1942, shortly after acquiring his master's degree at Stanford, Hull entered the Army, and after serving 31 months overseas, was discharged as a major with a Bronze Star.

Vote NO on the Sales Tax Repeal

We believe that a "NO" vote on the proposed ordinance to forbid a Carmel City Sales Tax is vitally important to the future of the city. Such a vote is, in our opinion, necessary to keep Carmel's city finances on a sound economic basis.

Because the costs of city government have been steadily rising, the property tax rate has had to rise to meet them. With the sales tax, property taxes can be kept below the legal limit, allowing a margin for emergency. It is entirely possible that property taxes can even be lowered further if the sales tax is kept in effect.

Because a large percentage of the costs of Carmel's city services are caused by non-residents, we feel that it is proper that they share in the expenses of the city. The city sales tax is the only practical way to get the non-residents to contribute.

Every so often the voters are faced by a question which concerns their city's future - - an issue where every ballot has a direct bearing on the conduct of city business. This is one of those times. We urge everyone to go to the polls Tuesday and vote--and vote "NO" on the sales tax repeal.

Signed:

The Amateur Gardener

GARDENING FOR HEALTH AND HAPPINESS

By CHARLES W. DELANEY

Most of our Carmel gardens are especially suited to the informal type of planting. The garden should be an extension of the house. This gives a feeling that one belongs to the other, and the plan should keep in mind the best possible views from the windows including, if possible, some distant view.

Sharp corners and straight lines are to be eliminated by suitable planting. The background planting must tie in with the foreground and middle distance in harmony of color both in flowers and foliage. The background planting is usually done with plants of a permanent nature, such as shrubs and trees. For the middle and foreground, annuals and perennials are the plants of choice, because these can be changed each year for a different effect so that the garden does not become too static.

VINE & SHRUB SUGGESTIONS:

Vines are very suitable for softening corners and walls. The wisteria is a good grower, if it gets water and some fertilizer; or the bignonia (trumpet vine); or climbing roses of which there are so many in any color; or the fig vine (ficus rapens), a fast grower that climbs upon any wall—it has no flowers, the small leafed variety is preferred.

There are many large leafed evergreen shrubs and trees suitable for background planting, such as lemons, oranges, pyracanthus, the improved genista, strawberry tree (arbutus unedo), magnolia (southern), California lilac, pittosporum tobira, barberry (berberis darwini), and raphiolepis indica.

A group which drops its leaves (deciduous) and blooms in Spring—the Japanese crab-apple, double peach, plum, quince (Japanese), snow-ball, spireas, mock-orange, and a new lilac.

TIMELY HINTS

Fuschias. They must have good drainage. Keep the soil damp, but never permit the water to stand at the roots. If the water stands in the pot, the plant should be repotted, adding coarse sand to the soil mixture. They are rapid growers and bloom on new wood. For that reason, they require plenty of food—fish emulsion or a good commercial fertilizer applied every three or four weeks during the growing season.

Fuschias like to have the leaves sprayed as well as the roots. It is best to do this in the morning hours before the sun is too warm.

Chrysanthemums. Now is the time to divide old clumps or plant new ones. Work bone-meal into the soil and put in a stake for support of later growth at least three feet tall. They are very susceptible to mildew, rust, and aphids, so use the same routine of spraying as for roses.

Daisies may be divided and planted the same as chrysanthemums. When you separate the new growths from the old stem, always discard the old stem as it seldom makes healthy plants.

ANNUALS AND PERENNIALS

The nurseries have a large stock of these plants ready to go in the garden. The bed should have been prepared several weeks ago, but you can plant at any rate. The day before planting, give the bed a good wetting down. The best time for planting is in the late afternoon or on a foggy day. After the plants are set in, with the dirt firmed about the roots, sprinkle lightly to eliminate air pockets at the roots. The plants should be shaded from hot sun for a few days with an upturned flat or burlap supported with sticks and, after a few days, sprinkle when the ground feels dry.

Stocks are the only annual plant that does not want too much water.

Dahlias. From now through April is the time to plant dahlias. Mix in bone meal, lay the tubers on the side, and cover with just enough soil, leaving a basin. Put in a 4-foot stake and fill the basin with water. In a week, the first shoot will appear; then add more soil, leaving top leaves exposed. When the sprout grows to 8 inches, work some fertilizer around the outer edge of the basin and water in thoroughly. You can increase flowering by pinching off the top at 12 inches, and during the blooming season, remove all spent flowers. If they go to seed, they stop blooming. Dwarf Unwin Dahlias are lovely little plants; they bloom freely and grow about 14 inches high. They are available in tubers or in plants. The tubers are planted one inch deep and require the same care as the large ones.

PRUNING

More harm is done by injudicious pruning than by the entire insect world. If you are not sure, then do not prune. Most plants should be allowed to grow as nature intended; they should not be shaped into animals, balls, and other forms. If a branch grows too long it may be cut back to shape the bush. If a bush has grown too dense it may be thinned out to allow sunshine to enter, or cross branches may be removed. If you have that uninhibited urge to prune, learn how and why. The College of Agriculture, Berkeley 4, Calif., will send wonderful instructions on "How to Prune."
